JOED VIERA/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER Medina citizens sign in to vote Tuesday.

It's been more than five years since dissolution talks first began in Medina, but in just one day officials got their answer on what the public wants the future of the village to look like.

With more than 1,400 village residents casting their votes, dissolution efforts were voted down by 422 votes.

A room full of residents, both for and against, gathered in the senior citizen center Tuesday as ballots were hand counted. The proposal to dissolve the village into the towns of Shelby and Ridgeway lost 527 to 949.
